PART II DUTY TO MAINTAIN

Legal duty to maintain

2. This Act -
 - (a) applies where a person has a legal duty to maintain another person, regardless of the nature of the relationship which creates the duty to maintain; and
 - (b) must not be interpreted so as to derogate from the law relating to the duty of persons to maintain other persons.

Parental duty to maintain children

3. (1) Subject to section 26 and to the law relating the duty of a parent to maintain a child who is unable to support himself or herself, both parents of a child are liable to maintain that child regardless of whether the -

- (a) child in question is born inside or outside the marriage of the parents;
- (b) child is born of a first, current or subsequent marriage; and
- (c) parents are subject to any system of customary law which does not recognise both parents' liability to maintain a child.

(2) For the purpose of determining whether or not a person who is subject to customary law is legally liable to maintain another person, a maintenance court must, notwithstanding anything to the contrary at customary law, have regard to the following principles -

- (a) husbands and wives are primarily responsible for each other's maintenance;
- (b) subject to subsection (1), the parents of a child are primarily and jointly responsible for the maintenance of that child;
- (c) subject to section 4(2), the legal principle, which imposes a legal duty on children to maintain their parents must be applied to children and parents who are subject to customary law.

(3) The parental duty to maintain a child includes the rendering of support which the child reasonably requires for his or her proper living and upbringing and this includes provision of food, accommodation, clothing, medical care and education.

(4) From the date of coming into operation of this Act, any law which requires a parent to give priority to the maintenance of children of a first marriage becomes invalid.

Principles to be applied in respect of maintenance

4. (1) Where a beneficiary is a child, the maintenance court must, in determining the nature or amount of maintenance payable to that beneficiary, have regard to the following principles -

- (a) both parents of the child are primarily responsible for the maintenance of that child;
- (b) the parents must, in accordance with their respective means, fairly share the duty to maintain their child or children;
- (c) the parental duty to maintain one particular child does not rank any higher than the duty to maintain any other child of that parent or any other person;
- (d) where a parent has more than one child, all the children are entitled to a fair share of that parent's resources; and
- (e) the duty of a parent to maintain a child has priority over all other commitments of the parent except those commitments which are necessary to enable the parent to support himself or herself or any other person in respect of whom the parent has a legal duty to maintain.

(2) Where a beneficiary is a parent, the maintenance court must, in determining the liability of a child to maintain a parent or the nature or amount of maintenance payable to the beneficiary, have regard to the following principles -

- (a) the liability of the child arises where the parent is unable to maintain himself or herself due to circumstances beyond that parent's control;
- (b) the child must, having regard to his or her own needs, be able to support the parent; and
- (c) the right of a parent to be maintained arises only where that parent's spouse or other person who is legally liable to maintain that parent is unable to do so.

Conditions precedent to granting of maintenance order

5. A maintenance court must not make a maintenance order unless it is satisfied that the person against whom the order is sought -

- (a) is legally liable to maintain the beneficiary;
- (b) is able to contribute to the maintenance of the beneficiary; and
- (c) fails or neglects to provide reasonable maintenance for the beneficiary.

- (a) the defendant;
- (b) the beneficiary; and
- (c) any person, other than the defendant, who is liable to maintain the beneficiary.

(2) When making a maintenance order under this Act or exercising any of the powers conferred on it by this Act, a maintenance court must have regard to the evidence adduced at the maintenance enquiry, all the circumstances of the case, and in particular to -

- (a) the lifestyle, income and earning capacity which each of the relevant persons has and is likely to have in the foreseeable future, including any increase in earning capacity, which the court considers a relevant person should reasonably take steps to acquire;
- (b) the property and resources which each of the relevant persons has and is likely to have in the foreseeable future;

- (c) the responsibilities and financial needs which each of the relevant persons has and is likely to have in the foreseeable future; and
 - (d) the fact that the defendant delayed the process since filing of the complaint or that he or she contributed partially to the delay.
- (3) Where the beneficiary is a child, the court must also have particular regard to -
- (a) the financial, educational and developmental needs of the beneficiary, including but not limited to housing, water, electricity, food, clothing, transport, toiletries, child care services, education (including pre-school education) and medical services;
 - (b) the age of the beneficiary;

 - (e) the direct and indirect costs incurred by the complainant in providing care for the beneficiary, including the income and earning capacity forgone by the complainant in providing that care; and
 - (f) the value of the labour expended by the complainant in the daily care of the child.
- (4) Where the beneficiary has disabilities, the court must have particular regard to -
- (a) the extent of the disability;
 - (b) the life expectancy of the beneficiary;
 - (c) the period that the beneficiary would in all likelihood require maintenance; and
 - (d) the costs of medical and other care incurred by the beneficiary as a result of the disability.
- (5) When considering a complaint relating to the substitution or discharge of an existing maintenance order, the maintenance court must have regard to the evidence adduced at the enquiry, and all the circumstances of the case, and in particular to -
- (a) whether there has been any change in the circumstances of the case since the date on which the existing maintenance order was made, including any change in the matters set out in subsections (2) and (3); and
 - (b) whether sufficient cause exists for the suspension, substitution or discharge of the existing maintenance order.

Maintenance orders

17. (1) At the conclusion of a maintenance enquiry and after consideration of the matters referred to in section 16, the maintenance court may, subject to Part II -

- (a) in the case where no maintenance order is in force, make a maintenance order against the person who has been proved to be legally liable to maintain a beneficiary;
 - (b) in the case where a maintenance order is in force -
 - (i) substitute that maintenance order by another maintenance order; or
 - (ii) discharge such maintenance order; or
 - (iii) suspend such maintenance order on such conditions which the maintenance court determines;

 - (e) may specify that all or part of contributions made under the order be made to a specific person or institution for a purpose specified in the order.

(3) If the beneficiary of a maintenance order is a child, the maintenance court may order that maintenance contributions be made to the mother of the child for expenses incurred by the mother in connection with the pregnancy and birth of the child, including but not limited to medical and hospital expenses, but a claim under this subsection must be made within 12 months from the date of birth of the child or within such other reasonable period as the court may allow on sufficient grounds shown by the mother.

(4) A maintenance order may direct that payment be made in kind by specified goods or livestock, for all or some portion of the settlement of amounts already owing or the future payment of instalments.

(5) If a defendant changes his or her place of residence or employment during the existence of the maintenance order, he or she must, within seven days after the day of such change and in the prescribed manner, give written notice to the maintenance officer of the court where the maintenance order is registered, and, if payment in terms of that order is to be made to any person, organisation or institution, then also to the person, organisation or institution to whom payment is to be made, and must state fully and clearly where his or her new place of residence or employment is situated.

Consent maintenance orders

18. (1) A defendant on whom a directive issued under section 10 or a summons issued under section 12 has been served may, on or before the date of the maintenance enquiry and in writing, consent to the granting of the maintenance order applied for and submit the written consent to the maintenance officer.

(2) On the date of the hearing the maintenance court may, without hearing or taking any evidence, make a maintenance order in accordance with the written consent referred to in subsection (1).

(3) A copy of the maintenance order referred to in subsection (2) must, in the prescribed manner, be served on the defendant by any maintenance officer, messenger of the court or maintenance investigator, and proof of service by that officer, messenger or investigator is sufficient evidence that the defendant was aware of the terms of the order in question.

Default maintenance orders

19. (1) If a defendant who, under section 12, has been properly summoned to appear at a maintenance enquiry fails so appear at the place and on the date specified in the summons, the maintenance court must, at the request of a maintenance officer for a default maintenance order, call on the complainant or any other person whose evidence might be relevant to, either in writing or orally, adduce evidence which would assist the court in making an order.

(2) At the conclusion of the enquiry contemplated in subsection (1) the maintenance court must consider the evidence adduced at that enquiry after which the maintenance court may, in default, make any of the orders contemplated in sections 17 and 20 or any other order which the court considers appropriate in the circumstances of the case.

(3) A copy of the default maintenance order referred to in subsection (2) must, in the prescribed manner, be served on the defendant by any maintenance officer, messenger of the court or maintenance investigator, and proof of service by that officer, messenger or investigator is sufficient evidence that the defendant was aware of the terms of the order in question.

(4) A person against whom a default maintenance order as contemplated in this section has been made may, in the prescribed form and manner and within 10 days of his or her becoming aware of the order, apply to the maintenance court for the substitution or setting aside of the default maintenance order.

(5) If, after an application has been made to it, a court is satisfied that a person against whom a default maintenance order was made had reasonable grounds for failing to make an application for substitution or setting aside of the default maintenance order within the period contemplated in subsection (4), the court may extend that period for such a longer period which the court determines.

(6) The application referred to in subsection (4) must specify the date on which the application is to be heard and determined.

(7) After making an application under subsection (4) the defendant must, in the prescribed form and manner, give to the complainant notice of the application and that notice must be served on the complainant at least 14 days before the day on which the application is to be heard.

(8) On the date set for the hearing of the application, the maintenance court may call on -

- (a) the defendant to adduce such evidence, either in writing or orally, in support of his or her application as the court may consider necessary; or
- (b) the complainant to adduce such evidence, either in writing or orally, in rebuttal of the application as the court may consider necessary.

(9) At the conclusion of the hearing contemplated in subsection (8), the maintenance court must consider the evidence adduced, after which the maintenance court may -

- (a) make an order confirming the default maintenance order referred to in subsection (2); or
- (b) vary the order referred to in subsection (2), if it appears to the court that good cause exists for the variation; or
- (c) set aside the order referred to in subsection (2), if it appears to the court that good cause exists for the setting aside, and convert the proceedings into a maintenance enquiry.

(10) A complainant who has been served with the application referred to in subsection (4), may, before or at the hearing of the application, consent in writing to the variation or setting aside of the order and that consent must be submitted to the maintenance officer of the relevant maintenance court before or at the hearing of the application.
